CHANGE

Community Ethnography Project
"Change"
Young Americans and their Struggles

Why do many young people not have hope? Why do they not care? The current economic crisis in America affects all of us, but that does not mean that we, as youth, cannot do things to make changes. Caring about the environment, green energy & green jobs, and making a difference in our communities are all things that we can care about and we can do. It all starts with CHANGE.

This documentary is about Change. This documentary will tell a story about young american people and their struggles. Our project is important because it's about what could happen to YOU. If your parents get laid off. If you have to start rationing gas and other resources because we already experienced that last year. You could lose a mother or father and money would start to change, like the things you use to do will change.

We care about this topic in a general sense, but are going to try to connect it to jobs and the environment in our documentary. Some of the things we will look into include graduation rates, and we could use examples such as young teens and what they been through. This relates to kids to get jobs in the new green economy.
